ful to vote for "Communists, Socialists or any party affiliated or cooperating with them." On the other hand a group of 200 Catholic laymen defied their clerical leaders and during the election campaign signed a letter denouncing Perón as a totalitarian and urging their coreligionists to vote for his opponent.

Later the Church hierarchy continued to act in ways which favored the political fortunes of the Peronista group. In September, 1948, when the government announced the discovery of a "plot" to assassinate Perón (in which ex-Peronista Cipriano Reyes and ex-United States diplomat John Griffiths were the alleged principals), the Argentine bishops took the announcement at its face value and ordered prayers of thanksgiving that Perón and his wife had escaped assassination to be said in all Argentine churches on September 26, 1948.

Some priests have been particularly active in the Peronista movement. The most notorious of these is Father Virgilio Filippo, who has a reputation for being one of the country's most vituperative orators, and who combines fanatic support for Perón with anti-Semitism and other not necessarily relevant doctrines. Padre Filippo has been a fervent worker for Perón and has frequently appeared in Perón political demonstrations. For instance, the Peronista paper El Laborista published a picture on July 12, 1948, of Father Filippo giving out prizes and medals to 480 workers who had done an outstanding job. He was quoted as urging the recipients to keep up the good work for the "social justice" state of Perón.

In 1948 Father Filippo was elected a Peronista member of the Chamber of Deputies, winning by the smallest majority of any on the Partido Peronista slate from the city of Buenos Aires. Although a pulpit orator of note, he has not made a very great splash as a member of the Chamber. It is significant that no attempt has been made by the Church hierarchy to muzzle him in any of his political activities.

Another Catholic clergyman, Father Arturo Melo, is an active Peronista in the province of Catamarca and published a daily paper La Unión. In 1948 he and another leading Peronista of the province, Senator Vicente Saadi, had a falling out and violently attacked one another in their two newspapers. Melo accused Senator Saadi of graft in gaining his seat in the Senate; another man had first been named by the provincial legislature, then his election had been canceled and Saadi had been named in his stead—and La Unión gave times and places and amounts of graft. As a result, Saadi lodged two lawsuits against Father Melo, one for libel and another for "disrespect" of his senatorial toga. The Bishop of Catamarca came to the defense of Father Melo, saying that Senator Saadi was acting wrongly in making a priest subject to a suit in a civil court.

Quite different was the attitude of the hierarchy toward Father José M. Dunphy, a priest in one of the suburbs of Buenos Aires, who gained considerable attention by his strong condemnations of the regime. Father Dunphy devoted numerous sermons to such subjects as liberty and Christian democracy and indicated that he thought the Perón government was acting in opposition to these ideals. In January, 1949, Father Dunphy was removed from his parish by Cardinal Copello, and his appeals to the Papal Nuncio for a trial went unheeded.

Other clerics have also opposed President Perón and his administration, though usually not with the firmness which marked Father Dunphy's behavior. Outstanding among the recognized opponents of the administration has been Monsignor Miguel de Andrea, Bishop of Temnos, and only Argentine bishop who did not sign the pastoral letter in favor of Perón's election in 1945. (He was not called upon to do so since his see is not in Argentina but is a more or less mythical one in the Near East.) He issued a statement during the campaign warning the workers not to sell their freedom for "a handful of benefits," and he added, "Class hatred is being set
